A perfect day in Munich

Option 1 (vegan Munich): Start your day with a vegan Breakfast at Emmis kitchen, and don't forget to try the delicious cinnamon rolls (about 12€). Since Emmis kitchen is located in the trendy district Glockenbachviertel, you can take a walk after your breakfast and explore the shops and cafes. If you need a little break, you can sit down at Gärtnerplatz and look at people walking around. Then you can take the Tram 16 at the stop Reichenbachplatz and jump of at the stop Nationalmuseum/Haus der Kunst. Don't forget to look outside during the ride, it's worth it (Single trip ticket 3.50€)! Now you can walk for 1 minute and you will see the famous Eisbachwelle, where you can watch people surfing on the Isar. Bring your camera with you! Now you can go for a walk through the English garden. If you walk towards the university, you can stop for a frozen yogurt at I love Leo, they also have vegan options (about 4€). After that you can take the subway (U3 direction Fürstenried West) and drive to the stop Gotheplatz, where you can get off and buy a vegan pizza at Doctor Drooly. From there you can walk 10 minutes to the nice little bar Senatore for a few drinks. To end the day perfectly, you can get a typical German currywurst at Gute Nacht Wurst (vegan option, about 4€).

The average cost for that day, including drinks, food, tickets for public transport in Munich for the whole day and sightseeing, is around 50€

Option 2 (culture day): Start your day with a coffee and a Pain au Chocolat at the pretty café Gans wo anders (6€). To get there, you can catch a subway and get off at Kolumbusplatz. From there you can take a walk to the Deutsches Museum, it's one of the biggest museums in Germany (8€). After you visiting the museum you can walk to Marienplatz and look at the very famous city hall. For lunch you can go downstairs to the subway, there you will find a shop called brezelina, where you can buy pretzels with different spreads or mashed potatoes with different toppings. This is one of my favorite takeaway snacks (2-5€). From Marieplatz it's a 10-minute walk to Hofgarten. This is a really nice location to sit down, enjoy your lunch and take pictures. Now you can walk to the Museum of Urban and Contemporary Art, which is free. When you are done looking at the beautiful artworks you can just keep walking and you will see the Frauenkirche, which is very impressive. After that you can keep walking on to the nice Bar alte Utting, it's an old ship on a bridge. They have really good food and drinks here, so it's perfect to end you day in this nice place (food is about 9€).

The average cost for that day including drinks, food, tickets for public transport in Munich for the whole day and sightseeing are around 45€.

Option 3 (live a Munich resident for a day): Start your day with a little shopping tour in the Kaufingerstraße at Marienplatz. For breakfast, you can have a coffee and something to eat from one of the bakery's around (5€). When you are done with your shopping tour, take the subway (U3 direction: Fürstenried West) and jump of at Thalkirchen. If you want to go to the zoo, you can go here, it's called Tierpark Hellabrunn (13€). If not, you can go to the supermarket, which is near the subway station. You can buy a disposable barbecue here as well as food and drinks (about 15€). Now you can find a nice spot along the Isar river, if it's warm enough you can swim there. There will be a lot of other students around, so you might even make some new friends. When you are done with your relaxing afternoon I highly recommend going to Bahnwärter Thiel. To get there you can take the U3 again and get off at Poccistraße (about 10€ entrance fee, but make sure to buy tickets online before because that's cheaper). They have food, drinks and music there (about 10€). Most of the time they are playing techno music, for all the techno fans out there. Its perfect to end your day like a Munich resident.

Average cost for that day including drinks, food, tickets for public transport in Munich for the whole day are around 50€ without the zoo. On that day the cost really depends on how much you eat, drink or what you are buying while shopping.

A perfect day in Landshut

Option 1 (City day): Start your day with a yummy breakfast at Café Neon, be sure to try the pancakes, they are so good (approx. 9€)! Afterwards you can just walk around the beautiful city a little bit. The old town is really pretty with its colorful houses. After that I can really recommend to go pottery painting. Definitely book an appointment on the website beforehand. It is so much fun and takes about 2 hours. The costs here are depending on what you are painting it can range from 8€ to 60 €. For lunch you can go to the Indian restaurant DHABA, its right next to the poetry painting. They have a lunch menu where the food is a bit cheaper than usual (around 8€). When you are done with that you can go to the Literaturcafe, its just a couple of minutes to walk there. Sit down and enjoy the view and a drink (I am always drinking Aperol there, about 5€). After that you should go and check out Schwarzer Hahn, if you have a pack of cards, bring them, it's a nice place to sit down and play a few games with some friends (drinks are around 5€).

Average cost for that day including drinks and food for the whole day and sightseeing are around 45€.

Option 2 (A Bavarian day): Start the day at the flea market in Ergolding, you can just take the bus to get there. Just stroll around there and you might find some treasures. When you are done with that you can drive into town and go to the Bavarian restaurant Hofreiter (around 15€). They have all kinds of Bavarian dishes, just try what sounds the best to you. My favorites dishes are Käsespätzle and Obatzda. Now, if its summer, you can walk to the Fischtreppe and just hang out there for a while (buy something to drink and snacks on the way). In winter you should go to the Pyramide and have a mulled wine there, it's so good and has really nice atmosphere (around 5€). If you feel like dancing afterwards you should go to the Club Trixie between 10pm – 10.30pm because at that time the entrance is free. Either get your stamp there and go back outside again and sit down in one of the surrounding bars or cafes, or stay inside right away. If you are hungry after a long night of dancing, head to Karls Leberkas for a midnight snack there. They are open until 3am (around 4€).

Average cost for that day including drinks and food for the whole day and sightseeing are around 25€. (If you want to go to the flea market this day should be a Saturday)

Other useful tips

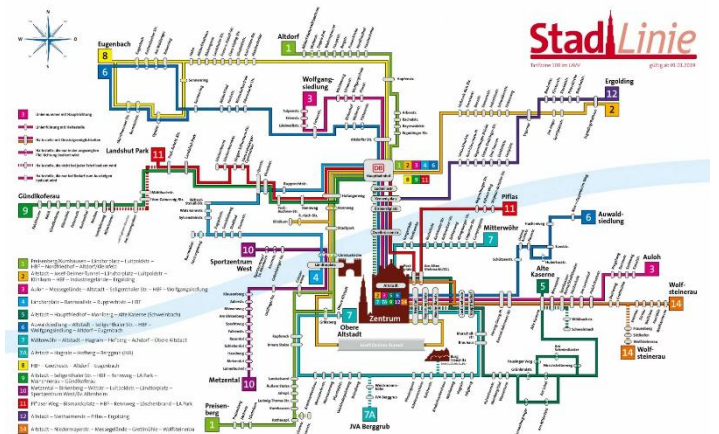

Munich:

- ✓ Download the MVG App
 - Useful for public Transport connections and ticket purchase
